

CJ Fong is the Deputy Head of the NEA's Division of Nuclear Safety Technology and Regulation. In that capacity, he oversees the NEA's efforts to improve regulatory cooperation among its member countries with the strategic objective of enhancing nuclear safety.

Prior to joining the NEA in January 2020, CJ spent 18 years at the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission in a variety of inspection, licensing, and policy-related roles. His most recent assignment on the staff was as the Branch Chief for Probabilistic Risk Assessment (PRA) Oversight. He also served as a Technical Assistant to Commissioner Wright and as an acting Technical Assistant to Chairman Svinicki.

CJ is a licensed professional engineer and holds a Bachelor's degree in Nuclear Engineering from the Georgia Institute of Technology and a Master's Degree in Nuclear Engineering (with PRA focus) from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he completed his thesis under the advisement of Dr. George Apostolakis.

CJ and his wife, Elizabeth enjoy cooking, travel, and sports. They live in Paris with their three children, Elise, Peter, and Wesley.
